City asked to join regional communication system linking fire, police agencies

by Lindy Magner

County of San Diego administrators envision a regional communications system linking area fire departments, law enforcement agencies and paramedic services, allowing various agencies to easily call on others during emergencies and disasters.

Also, Caltrans and Imperial County agencies would be linked, as well as some city public works departments.

However, in these difficult economic times, cities such as Lemon Grove are carefully surveying the situation before they leap into any agreement.

At a City Council briefing meeting Tuesday, an overview of the proposed 800-megahertz communication system was presented to council members and city staff by Robert Hickman of the county Department of Information Services and Steve Buckley of Motorola, the vendor for the proposed regional system.

Hickman said the major benefit of the regional system would come during emergencies, when all fire departments and public service agencies could solicit aid immediately, thus avoiding fires and riots which get out of hand when departments are isolated.

The new system would allow the Sheriff's Department deputies to convert from its current VHS system to 800 megahertz.

Hickman noted that Mexico's use of the airwaves is causing interferences with the less powerful systems, and the conversation to a 800-megahertz system is needed.

"What we have is no longer effective; if we don't put something like this together, we'll be ripe for disaster," he said.

Buckley echoed that belief: "In times of emergency, we're finding out that our public agencies can't communicate. The Oakland fire got out of control because fire departments we not able to talk to each other," he said.

Hickman stated that the regional system would provide communication capabilities to all areas, eliminated the pockets of areas not covered by existing communication systems.

He explained that because the county does not have the capital to fund such a system itself, it was calling on cities to form a County Service Area (CSA) which would fund the $28 million communication system through property tax assessments. The annual assessment for Lemon Grove would be about $7 per single-family dwelling, said Hickman. The county would then market 15-year bonds to raise capital for the system.

Over 15 years, city residents would contribute a total of $480,000 to fund the basic system; other monies would need to be raised to fund any equipment upgrades within that city.

Hickman said the county needs answers from the 16 cities it is soliciting by late December, or the hopes of developing a regional system will be forever dashed. He noted that there are a limited number of frequencies available for 800-megahertz systems.

"If we aren't able to proceed with an application for a CSA by the end of the year, there will be the risk of agencies coming to us, asking for those frequencies. Without those frequencies, we won't be able to have a regional system in the next decade," he said.

To date, seven cities, most in North County, have passed resolutions indicating participation in the regional system, with none experiencing public protest, according to Hickman. Lemon Grove is the first East County city to be approached; La Mesa's City Council will be given a presentation Nov. 9.

Lemon Grove Mayor Brian Cochran was less than impressed with the system and its cost.

"I haven't heard anything to justify the cost of this," said Cochran. "I don't see a riot scenario occurring in East County."

He stated that before he would vote for such a system, he would need to see a consultant's analysis of its benefits.

Councilman Jerry Legerton echoed Cochran's sentiments.

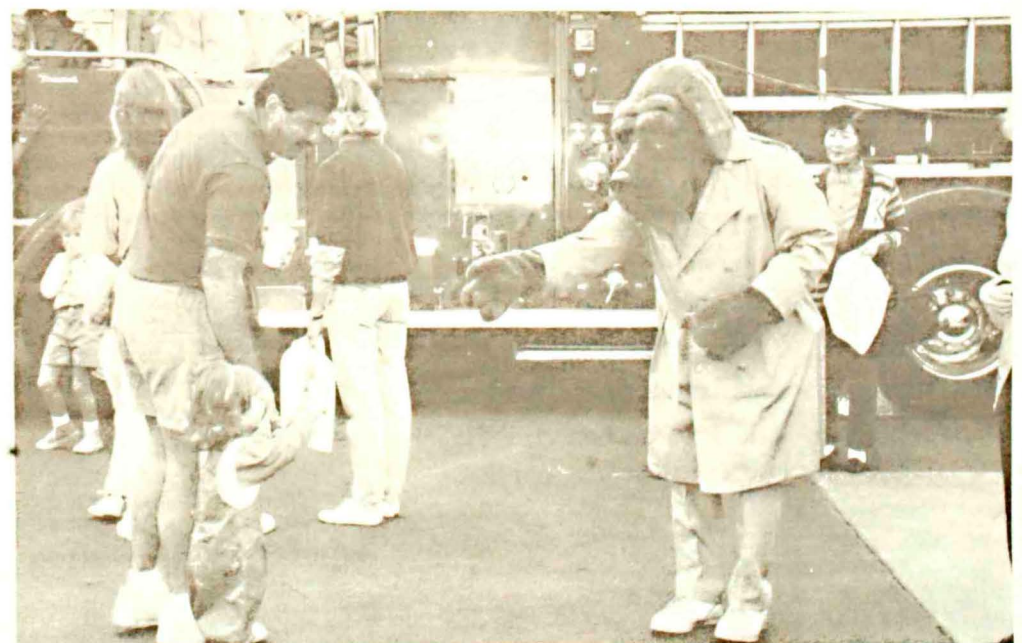

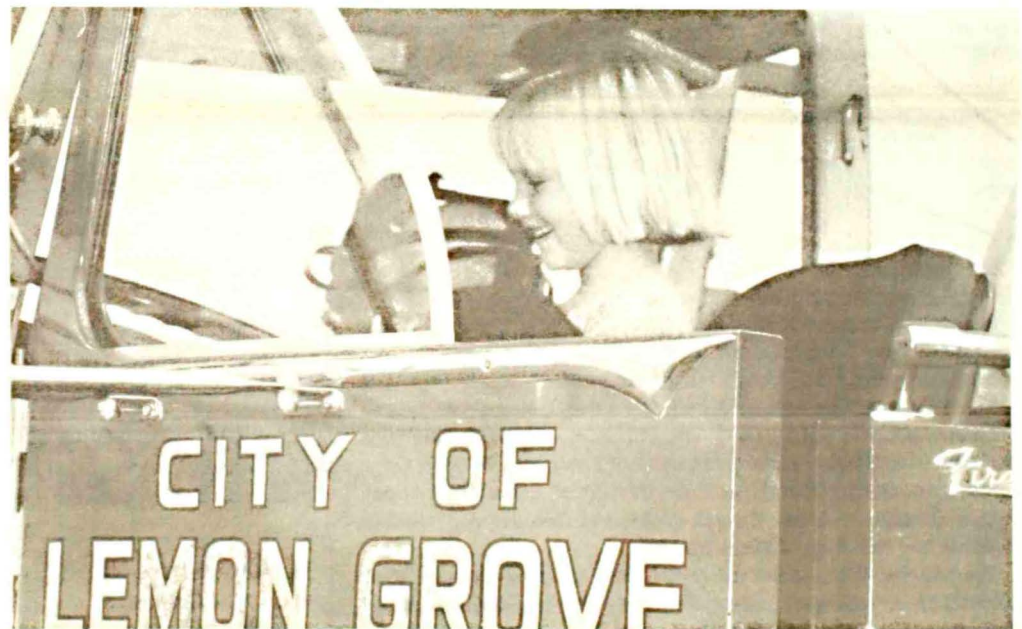

"At almost every level, we get seduced by technology, to find out that the new doesn't always work better than what we had. Why spend $28 million when, really, we don't have the law enforcement officers to respond to the calls as it is," he said.

The system did get support from Councilman Craig Lake, who stated that "it's a must" for the Sheriff's Department to be on an 800 megahertz system, enabling them to access other public service agencies.

However, he had question about its funding, wondering why

Breakfasting with the firefighters

During Saturday's open house at the fire station, breakfast and fun were served up. Children got to sit in the driver's seat of a fire engine, and make friends with sheriff's crime dog, McGruff. According to firefighter James Ek, who coordinated the event, over 200 people attended the breakfast, raising about $800. Under deadline pressure, the Review forgot to publicize the event last week, and publicly apologizes to the firefighters for the unintended slight.

The drought of the '30s

The terrible flooding which occurred in the Midwest this year gave me a similar sympathetic feeling as the great drought of the '30s. The devastation was entirely opposite, but was similar in that both were caused by nature.

While the southern half of the Mississippi Valley was blowing away from steady dust and sand storms during the 1930s, the farmers were packing up and heading for California. A John Steinbeck novel, "Grapes of Wrath," and later the movie, depicted the hard times of that era. It tells the story of the poor farmers who had to leave their cotton fields of Oklahoma and Texas to pick prunes and other fruit in California.

Haddock among top 10 for county 'teacher of the year'

San Miguel Elementary School Teacher Nadine Haddock was one of the 10 finalists in the San Diego County Salute to Teachers "teacher of the year" event, held Oct. 9 at the Civic Center.

She and 32 other area district "teachers of the year" competed for four top county spots.

Winners were Terri Gootgeld of the Encinitas Union School District, Leticia Rocha of the San Ysidro School District, Barry

Bosworth of Granite Hills High School in the Grossmont Union High School District, and Sandra McBrayer of the County Office of Education's homeless outreach program. Those winners received $1,000 each and crystal apples. They will now compete for the statewide "teacher of the year" title. The six other finalists received $500 each and crystal apples.

This is the 20th year for the teacher awards.

city residents should pay to better equip a law enforcement agency already funded by a city contract.

Also, some council members could not see the benefits of paying for such a system when the city is already part of Heartland, a joint powers agreement which through its own 800 megahertz system, links eight East County fire departments and fire districts. Hickman is hoping Heartland will vote to join the regional system.

However, according to Bostonia Fire Chief Darrell Jobes, Heartland chairman of the board, the elected officials from its four member cities and the four fire district board representatives from the unincorporated areas deadlocked 4-4 in a June vote on the issue.

Cities belonging to Heartland are La Mesa, El Cajon, Santee and Lemon Grove; unincorporated fire district members are Bostonia, San Miguel, Lakeside and Alpine.

If Heartland voted to join, the CSA would purchase its radio transmitters, said Hickman.

He said that county system will work without the inclusion of Heartland, though he would like to see the agency participate. And, cities which elect not to participate will still contribute to the system through cost increases in their contracts with the Sheriff's Department, said Hickman.

Jobes said that further consideration will not be given to joining the county's system until Heartland decides how it will respond to an August request by La Mesa and El Cajon police departments to join Heartland's communication system.

The subcommittee which will explore the feasibility of including those police departments in Heartland met for the first time this week, and Jobes is not sure when its work will be complete.

He stated that he cannot say if the 8-member board will move from its deadlock vote.

"If it remains, then obviously there will be no movement ahead in joining the county system," he said.

"But that won't prohibit the individual cities or districts from joining on their own," he added.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

A tribute

Since it has been a duty that I have assumed in this column, and one that I perform in all humility, I will once again attempt a tribute.

Having been in Lemon Grove as long as I have, I have felt compelled to say something about people who have been more than just residents of our town. I realize that it really does not need to be only said in the past tense.

There is a man who lives quietly in our midst who should be recognized, and not after the fact. I wrote about his wife, shortly after her death, and know now that "Saint Helen" should have been extolled rather than only eulogized. I would like to hereby do that for her husband so that he will know our love and appreciation now, if not later.

I am, of course referring to Byron Netzley. He came to us as a very young man from the Imperial Valley. He was a principal and was recommended for the position of Superintendent of the fledgling Lemon Grove School District. His youth was a question, but his stern visage (the face that he presented to opposing teams on the grid iron at Whittier College) impressed Mr. Pearse and others that he could do the job. It is to their eternal thanks that the decision was made to hire Byron for our children.

In the over 40 years of involvement in education, Byron gave his all to Lemon Grove, and no one will say that there was better. I can recall his demeanor at the board meetings that just calmed everyone down to make decisions that were "right" for Lemon Grove. I marveled at the way that he could present a problem, outline the alternatives, and make it clear to the board members what should be done. They then would bang the gavel and take the credit for a monumental decision.

Byron asked me one time why I did not attend many school board meetings. I told him that when they did something that I did not agree with, I would be there, loudly.

But, I also wanted him to know that I was strongly in favor of the way that they were doing things and confident that they would continue to do so.

Graduating from high school at the age of 16, Byron entered the labor force and spent two years in the very difficult and often menial forms of employment. When he asked himself one day, "is this the best there is?" he was answered by a call from his high school football coach who had been hired for the same job at Whittier College. He was rounding up his stars from the past, and Byron carried the pigskin to a degree and a teaching credential.

The naming of the Byron Netzley Education Center was a proper tribute to the man who has had more of an impact upon the community of Lemon Grove than any other in my recollection. There have been success stories in the fields of finance, medicine, and politics that began in our town, but none of these can compare to the overall spectrum that we call life in Lemon Grove. Byron has touched the lives of more individuals, and in a more meaningful way by a wide margin. I want to say these things now, rather than later and be wishing I had. Thank you, Byron Netzley, and know that we all love you and appreciate you.

I am sure that Saint Helen is patient and would not want us to be deprived of your company for many more years to come.

If you have any questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946

Graffiti Clean-Up Day

Nov. 7 is slated for the next graffiti paint-out day in Lemon Grove. The last event in April was very successful with public participation and achieving awareness and education; $1,500 in contributions went toward supplies, printing and promotion.

The war chest is depleted and funds are being solicited. If you wish to participate financially, make check payable to: Community Advisory Committee, address Lemon Grove City Hall, 3232 Main St., Lemon Grove, CA 91945 Councilwoman Lois Heiserman chairs the committee and Doug Yount, assistant city manager, coordinates. The ten members of the committee meet twice monthly at the fire station, and focus only on combating graffiti.

The committee maintains a graffiti hotline (685-2093), provides liaison with the Sheriff's Department, monitors disposition of arrests, is assertive in assuring compliance with the city's anti-graffiti ordinance, attends regional anti-graffiti task force meetings, monitors state legislation regarding graffiti, is establishing a neighborhood clean-up "Adopt-a-Block" program, responds to citizen reports of graffiti vandalism and coordinates the Graffiti Clean-Up Days.

ABWA to hold run/walk

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Statistics show that one woman in eight will develop breast cancer at some time in her life. But, with early detection, the survival rate is 93 percent.

On Sunday, Oct. 31, Valle del Sol charter Chapter (which is based in El Cajon and serves all of East County) of the American Business Women's Association will hold its second annual "Race for Life" 10K run and 5K Run/Walk, an event to raise breast cancer awareness, education and prevention throughout the community.

The money raised from this event will remain in San Diego County and benefit both women and men.

A portion of the proceeds will be used for Valle del Sol's local scholarship program.

The 5K Run/Walk starts at 7:30 a.m., followed by the 10K Run at 8 a.m. The race course begins in Balboa Park, goes uptown, then turns down Jupiter Street to a rousing finish at the San Diego Civic Center. This is a fast downhill course, and all participants are sure to get their best times, regardless of age, sex or ability. Special divisions are designated for breast cancer survivors and "blister brigade" (for those who have never participated in an organized run/walk). All are welcome!

Participants will receive colorful T-shirts, great refreshments and giveaways from many donors.

There will be entertainment and chances to win prizes in a free drawing. Awards will be presented to the first three males and female finishers in each age division, and in team divisions.

Entry fees are $15 per individual, $75 for teams of three to five members; late fees of $18 and $90 apply after Oct. 22.

Volunteers for race day duties are needed.

For registration details and other information, call the Race For Life Hotline, 561-3662.

Local Firm to Host Seminar on Global Investment Opportunities

Andy Knutson, the Edward D. Jones & Co. investment representative in La Mesa, will host a seminar titled "Global Investing: A World of Opportunity," Wednesday, Oct. 20, from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. This satellite program will be presented free of charge and will illustrate how investing globally can increase investment returns without increasing risk.

"One of the surest ways to build wealth is to own the stock of growing companies that produce the goods and services we use everyday," Knutson said. "Today, more than 70 percent of the goods and services used worldwide are produced outside the United States. Many of today's most attractive investment opportunities can be found among non-U.S. companies. This seminar will discuss some of those opportunities and show investors how to take advantage of these global markets."

The program will be broadcast live from London, Hong Kong and the Edward D. Jones & Co. home office in St. Louis. Discussion topics will include the outlook for foreign markets, industries and companies, and how to take advantage of global investments. The presentations will be followed by a question-and-answer period.

For more information or to register for this broadcast, call Knutson at 698-6688.

High school district enrollment hits 20,000

by Susan Wolfe-Fleming

The regular meeting of the Grossmont Union School District board on Oct. 7, reported on new student enrollment numbers, involvement of the new student representative on the board and language in district policies dealing with non-discrimination and sexual orientation.

Student representative Nicole Splinter from Grossmont High School reported on the first of student meetings which are attended by representatives from high schools in the district. Meetings are held the first Monday of each month. During the recent meeting students talked about the use of a computer and scanner to publish a newsletter and agreed to encourage fellow students to write to newspapers about Proposition 174.

Board member Michael Harrelson attended the student meeting and commented on how inspiring it was to see the enthusiasm and focus. He encouraged all to attend a meeting.

The board then heard reports about enrollment. Daniel Kitchen, director of curriculum, assessment and planning, said that at the end of the third week of school the districtwide enrollment reached exactly 20,000 students and that this was more than the projection of 19,815. He added that if enrollment continues to grow at this rate, in the next five years the growth would equal one new high school.

Also, Kitchen gave a status report on enrollment of district special education students and the programs in which they are enrolled; there are special day students, others in resource programs and those who attend special schools.

New language regarding non-discrimination and sexual orientation is being reviewed by the board. Comments in the past from community groups have made the board and staff feel that there is very little common ground in which to mediate the differences expressed recently at the Race and Human Relations Committee meeting.

The most recent action was non-support of new language in the curriculum and instruction policy. Potential future actions might include:

- A general statement making non-discrimination applicable to students as well as employees.
- A specific section making slurs and derogatory remarks of discrimination inappropriate.
- Not addressing the question any further.

The governing board meetings are held the first and third Thursdays at 7 p.m. in Grossmont High School's cafeteria. The public is welcome to attend.

Letter to the editor

No on Prop. 174!

Dear Editor:

As a parent and a taxpayer I am appalled at the possibility of our tax dollars being given to private schools if the Voucher Initiative - Prop. 174 passes on Nov. 2. Private schools are not required to hire credentialed teachers or be accredited. There will be no way to monitor private schools to account for the expenditure of our public money. Private schools do not have to teach the "core curriculum" to their students. They can teach what ever they deem appropriate.

For instance, if Prop. 174 passes, and a person like David Koresh lived in California, he could apply for $2,600 per child and he could not be denied our public money. Isn't that a scary thought?

Anyone who thinks they can send their child to a good private school for $2,600 a year had better think again since most cost between $8,000 - $10,000 a year.

Vote No on Prop. 174 - it will destroy our public schools and hurt our kids. We need to raise the standards for all schools, not eliminate them for some schools.

Bringing back those classic roadster days

About two years ago, Jerry Pease, owner of Lemon Grove Travel, began building his own set of wheels.

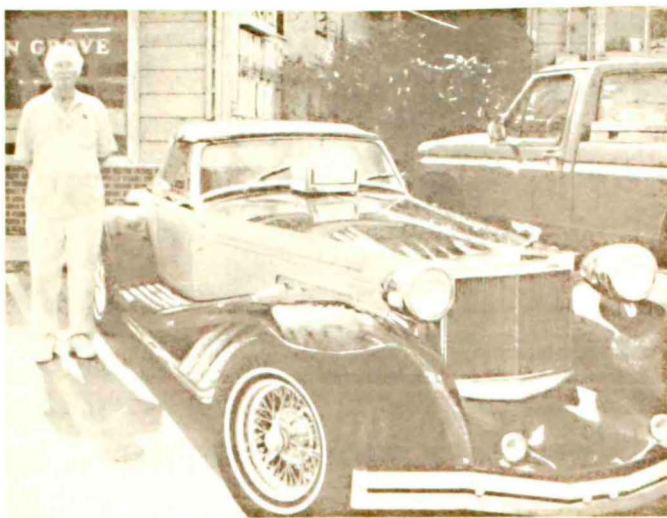

Called a Corsair, the custom-built car is similar to the Cord of the 1920s.

"It looks like the Cord, except that car had a point on the back of it like a boat - this one doesn't, he said.

He noted that some skilled friends were instrumental in the car's completion, helping with the wiring, painting and engine rebuilding.

"I got a lot of help building it," said Pease, who once taught high school auto shop. The 2-seat convertible has "a lot of chrome" and a rebuilt Ford V-8 engine.

He noted that there are about 20 such home-constructed Corsairs in the county, all built from a set of plans. Recently, a Chicago company began manufacturing the models, selling them for $70,000 each, said Pease.

Jerry and his self-built car

Though he originally built the car for himself, the just-finished product is now up for sale in order to raise capital for an expansion of his company.

"We now have four travel agents; I'd like to double that," he said.

How much does he want for the car? He's open to offers.

City Hall piles up 1,000 during 'Sweater Saturday' event

For lack of a Vons store in town, city officials decided to use City Hall as a collection point for sweaters local residents wished to donate in the countywide sweater drive sponsored in part by SDG&E. At City Hall, about 1,000 sweaters came in; another 100 were collected at the fire station. Pictured above, City Manager Jack Shelper (left); assisting are Adam Cochran (son of the mayor) and City Clerk Christine Taub. Below, flanked by his daughter and son, Mayor Brian Cochran reports for his shift - first order of business, donating the sweater off his back.

From Where I sit

The beautiful area of Longfellow's "Land of 10,000 Lakes" in Minnesota was gradually drying up from the lack of rain over that long length of time. I was just a youngster during that period but I still have memories of those dry times.

The beautiful mansions on the shores of that spectacular area ended up high and dry far away from the crystal clear waters edge. Some of the smaller lakes in the chain were compleley dried up and replaced by weeds and mud.

The United States government under President Franklin D. Roosevelt came to the rescue to try and revive the lakes. Some very big and deep wells were drilled at strategic points along the many, many miles of shoreline to fill up the waterless lakes. These huge wells were numerous and very costly to drill, operate and maintain. The big pumps had to have extra heavy duty electricity which had to be brought in specially to operate them.

After a couple years of pumping, the water level had not risen enough to make much difference. It was just another project of the "New Deal" that the taxpayers had to shoulder and reflects on the national debt of the present.

The most beautiful asset in Minneapolis was Minnehaha Falls, which was located right in the city. This waterfall was depicted so much in Longfellow's writings that it became one of the great tourist attractions of the area. It, too, was dry as a bone with not a drop of water to cascade over the rocky fall. When a dignitary would visit the "Land of 10,000 Lakes," the city would turn on the faucet so the falls could come alive and fall again.

The drought of California in the last few years was a drop in the bucket compared to the 1930s. With all the modern-day technologies, including a man walking on the moon and many other miracles, I would think they could desalt sea water or, better still, use some of the excess water from flooded areas. I guess that it will be done in time.

Born with a green thumb

by Victoria Orr

Melba Finegan of Lemon Grove knows gardening. Born in 1900 with a green thumb and a silver trowel, she's pulled more weeds and planted more seeds than most people on the planet.

"I lived at a time when you raised your own food or went hungry," she said. That was in Parowan, Utah, on a 640-acre ranch.

From the time Melba and her brothers and sisters left the womb, they were planting, weeding and harvesting.

Today, Melba lives in an apartment. But that hasn't stopped her from using her green thumb. Outside her kitchen window can be seen a 100-foot by 12-foot garden running the whole length of the apartment building. "It used to be nothing but bare, hard ground," she said.

But Melba soon took care of that. Armed with a hoe and rake, she transformed it into a little piece of paradise blooming with gardenia, mock orange, spider plants, myrtle, bearded iris, and strawberries.

"I can't do what I used to," she confessed. For the last year, Melba has left the serious weeding to the landlord.

With all the years of gardening under her belt, Melba has accumulated some best-kept secrets. When asked about sharing them, her eyes lit up.

"Manure tea. Plants love manure tea. Mix some manure in a bucket with some water, then let it sit for awhile. Pour it on the plants. It's a real treat for them."

"Also, I believe in planting plants together that have the same needs. I put my plants that like a lot of water together, and then my plants that don't need as much in another place."

"And for people who have trouble with their roses, just plant some potatoes alongside. They feed the roses."

Melba also remembered a time when she was able to sell what she cultivated. "In 1943, I moved to Lemon Grove. I had 1-1/10 acre. I grew avocados, grapes, beets, peanuts, carrots and one-fourth acre of strawberries. People came from as far as Coronado to buy my avocados and strawberries." Back then, Lemon Grove was truly country with a total of six other houses, Melba recalled.

With another birthday on the way, Melba still isn't looking to retire her plot of ground. "To have a happy, healthful life," she said, "have a home where there's soil and you can grow your own things. It truly adds longevity to your life."
